The holiday season is right around the corner and since it is the most anticipated time of the year, people spend tons of time doing Christmas shopping, decorating their houses, and going on family vacations. While no one can deny the fun that comes with the festive season, there is one thing that we have to be careful of – the stress. The truth is, when everyone is rushing to get all their shopping done and everything is done just the way they want it to be, nobody can focus on the important things that matter. However, even if this is how you do things most of the year, there are ways to minimize the stress of the holiday season. Whether you're looking for a fun way to unwind from the pressures of the season or just a simple and practical way to ensure that you're not giving your new year the slip, the following ideas should get you thinking:

Paint yourself a picture Whether you are looking for a fun, easy, or practical way to handle holiday stress, the best thing you can do is to take some time to create a mental image of the Christmas you want to have. How do you want your house and your family to look? What do you want to see when you open your presents in December? What do you envision on Christmas Eve when your kids and your spouse come home after a long day of work? Write all these things down and then, make a point to visualize them everyday so that they become part of your reality.

Skip procrastination While it is understandable to want to move on with things as soon as possible, when you're having a bad day or you find yourself in some sort of stress, it's better to put off your Christmas shopping for a few days. Unfortunately, procrastination often leads to even more stress and anxiety because we become so busy trying to buy everything immediately that the entire experience never feels quite right. If you absolutely have to do your Christmas shopping immediately or if you just want to make sure that you don't lose the holiday magic, just keep your eyes open, be ready to grab some presents, and then take a couple of hours to just sit back and unwind. Dress for the occasion It is the holiday season after all, and people go to

What's New In?

Save your shoot to YouTube in 1-5 Seconds. No synchronisation issues. High FPS: 240 Dual Bandwidth: Bluetooth & USB Professional app with popup interface, stereo sound, and more. Pow in case you want to review the video you've recorded, SloGo records it in HD and let's the user playback it at desired speeds. PowIn with GoPro SloGo has an additional software that is known as POWIn. The app requires an internet connection, allowing it to upload the recorded clips to YouTube. The software is accessible via SloGo or via the Android and iOS app, it will upload any videos recorded with a camera powered by SloGo or GoPro Hero. General SloGo UI The first thing that will draw your attention is SloGo's simple interface that is not unlike those of GoPros. What's more, the app offers some interesting features such as the capability to add text to the images or to have them animated. You can apply the filter to control the saturation level and brightness. Once you have captured an interesting shot, the tool allows you to preview it in slow motion and even to add background music to the clip. You also have the capability to record up to 100 seconds. Things to note in case you want to record yourself while you're using SloGo If you are using SloGo and want to record yourself, then your camera should be linked to the app via a Wi-Fi connection. It requires between 1.0 and 1.5-volt power supply and it should be powered via a micro USB connector. In other words, you should have nothing more than a GoPro Hero. PowIn to YouTube The app allows you to upload the clips you've captured to YouTube. Therefore, you should have an internet connection to get the job done. PowIn in case you want to review the video you've recorded. General SloGo test In case you are looking for a way to try SloGo for yourself, you may want to consider testing it. might do the trick. Pros 1-5 Seconds to Record Video Anyone can record videos using SloGo. It is compatible with both Android and iOS devices. This simple yet powerful app can be used on different devices such as the following: iPhone iPad iPod

System Requirements For SloGo:

Dishonored is currently in development for PC, Xbox One and PlayStation 4. We know that players are interested in the best experience that the game can provide. To ensure this, we have worked closely with AMD and NVIDIA to make sure that the game will work optimally on the widest range of PC configurations possible. We want players to have the opportunity to run Dishonored at high framerates and high resolutions on all machines. However, we know that not everyone owns the fastest machine or has the best graphics card. In that case, we also have a couple
