After the form has been submitted, the PHP logic processes the data and creates a list of the result. Once the PHP is done, I want the output to be available as a CSV file (header only) in the same directory. Any idea how to approach this problem? A: You can use fopen(), fpassthru(), or file_put_contents(), but the CSV format should be documented somewhere, and your header should be using the correct delimiters for the value, text, comment, etc. Post Your Comment 5 Comments It depends on the shop, but I always prefer 2-tone finishes. Black is much more elegant and stylish (if that's what you're going for), but the silver hides scratches and marks better. Plus, I like the silver color better than black because 3da54e8ca3
