All employees must be aware that if they fail to abide by the rules that the organization has set down then their careers or the business may be in trouble. Using the MS Word Employee Warning Notice Template Software program is an easy way for you to create a number of written notices and print them out. X-rays cause biological damage because they are partly absorbed and subsequently produce secondary particles that can cause lethal damage to biological systems. Particles of 2.5-10 micrometers in diameter are of particular concern. When the absorbed energy is of the order of MeV, there is significant damage to the DNA and cellular structures of low-lying electronic states. Depending on the dose rate and the impurities in the irradiated samples, subcellular organelles may be destroyed. In order to reduce the risk to the inhabitants from accidental exposure to ionizing radiation, there is a need for simple and economical devices for sterilizing medical equipment and other objects of biological interest. Current sterilization techniques for use with surgical equipment include ethylene oxide gas sterilization, sterilization with steam, and the use of gamma and e-beam irradiation. In spite of their importance in sterilizing medical equipment, gas sterilization and steam sterilization techniques have serious drawbacks. Ethylene oxide gas is a hazardous gas that is particularly toxic to those with impaired lung function and to pregnant women and young children. Steam sterilization is typically carried out at elevated temperatures and is slow, particularly for heat-sensitive materials, and does not kill all organisms. Gamma or electron beam irradiation may also have serious disadvantages when applied to delicate medical equipment. There is therefore a need for alternative sterilization methods for non-biological and biological materials, including sensitive biological materials such as medical equipment. The present invention provides such methods. Additionally, x-rays of energy less than 500 KeV are known to be particularly effective in locating the position of objects in x-ray computerized tomographic (CT) imaging systems. However, traditional CT systems have not been used for sterilization because the standard dose is about 4-8 mGy. Such doses would be effective for sterilizing the typical container of product, but not the people using such systems. The present invention provides radiation at dose rates of 1 to 2 mGy/s. Some ionizing radiation sources are known in the prior art. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 4,244,604 to Davis et al. discloses a x-ray apparatus for lithographic printing applications,
