Live attenuated parainfluenza virus type 3 (PIV3) virus expressing the hemagglutinin (HN) and fusion (F) proteins from human and murine PIV3 were evaluated for safety and immunogenicity in healthy 9-15-month-old children. Recombinant viruses expressing the ectodomain of HN and F of the human PIV3 A2 strain [designated rPIV3(hPIV3)] or expressing HN alone (designated rPIV3(hHN)] were used. Groups of children were intranasally administered the following doses of each virus: 10(6), 10(5), 10(4) or 10(3) plaque forming units (pfu) (N=6/dose) or, for rPIV3(hHN), the same doses of virus either alone or co-administered with 10(7) pfu of a recombinant adenovirus type 5 expressing the G protein of the human parainfluenza virus type 2 strain (Ad-hPIV-2/G) as a mucosal adjuvant. No viral shedding was detected in the nasal washes after either virus administration. The seroconversion rates for immunoglobulin G against PIV3 as measured by an enzyme immunoassay were 67% following 10(3) pfu of rPIV3(hHN), 89% after 10(4) pfu of rPIV3(hHN) and 43% after 10(4) pfu of rPIV3(hPIV3). After administration of 10(5) pfu of rPIV3(hHN), 38% of the children were confirmed to have been exposed to PIV3 viruses. The geometric mean titer of seroconversion against PIV3 after 10(3) pfu of rPIV3(hHN) was

The King of Fighters' growing popularity prompted the creation of a free online game which is called Bladium. It's a 2D fighting game, similar to Street Fighter and Mortal Kombat, but with a new balance of speed and strategy. Well, it's certainly worth a try if you're a fan of the genre. Here's a review of it. The Game Bladium is a single-player fighter game. Your goal is to defeat other players and not to lose to them. As the tournament begins, you and your opponent are limited to a number of characters to use in the battle. Your fighter's stats, and moves which alter them, depend on the character you choose. For instance, Madhurika, the red-haired hero of the Asian continent, is, according to this game, good for defense, whereas Bob is the best for the strategy aspect. Each fighter has at least three different attacks. For example, Art of War has a projectile that hits, can be charged for more power, and can cause a critical hit. All of these techniques are connected to buttons, and you can press them quickly to issue the necessary technique. Once you've chosen your favorite fighter, you can start pitting your skills against the enemies. Well, the first thing you'll notice is that both sides can learn a set of techniques which are unique for each character. Some are better for offense, and some for defense, so for example, Art of War can learn spines, whereas Bob can learn the double kick. The game ends when any one of the players is defeated. However, each fight is only a minimum prelude to the real fight. On the beginning of the match you're presented with a 5x5 grid where up to 5 characters are fighting. The vertical and horizontal lines present the borders of the grid, and the center holds the camera angle of the player. By pressing the appropriate key, you can activate the camera angle and start fighting. A well-done match between the two characters starts with a number of attacks. Each one has a different set of attacks, and you have to choose the right one. However, there's a drawback: after choosing a move, you have to wait for a couple of seconds to see how your opponent's reactions will be. If you make the right choice, then, before any of your opponent's attack, you can issue a 6a5afdab4c
