Q: How to remove auto-generated files from the Android project after successful clean in Eclipse? I'm using Android Studio and have a very simple Java project. The only source files are in the src/main/java directory. After I perform a clean in Eclipse, these source files get auto-generated into the gen/ directory. This is good; however, it seems I can't clean up the gen/ directory. Even though Eclipse will list it under the "Resource Filtering" section, clicking on the "X" button does not remove it from the project. Any way to get around this? I need to do this because Android Studio assumes that the AndroidManifest.xml file is in the gen/ directory, which is wrong. So the project will fail to build. A: It looks like the proper way to perform a clean in Android Studio is to go to File -> Project Structure -> Modules from the menu, and then hit the cog icon in the bottom right. Odor detection and discrimination in younger and older adults. Odor identification and discrimination in younger and older adults. J. Exp. Psychol.: General, 136, 291-300, 2002. Researchers have long demonstrated age differences in olfactory perception. Although there is accumulating evidence that such differences are linked to cognitive development, the extent to which they reflect differential access to information or differences in olfactory perception and memory is less clear. In this study, which was conducted to a large degree offline, younger and older adults were asked to indicate the presence or absence of seven human body odors in different proportions. The results suggest that, in addition to differences in memory capacity between groups, differences in encoding and/or maintenance of odor-related information may be responsible for differences in odor perception.Q: how to get fixed image width and height in jquery using css class? I want to get the fixed width and height of an image inside a div using jquery.
