An on-line health-care management system where clinicians can read, view and share patient data. The development of an on-line health-care management system has been proposed. It will enable clinicians to read, view and share patient data to manage patients' health. The system will be designed so as to provide a framework within which the medical decision-making process may be displayed, reviewed, updated, and modified. An effective communications system will be an integral part of the system. This paper describes the design, implementation and evaluation of a prototype system. It was developed using the DIN 64601/ISO 8601 standard protocol. Q: How to set the points according to the measurement between the line segments Hi I have two line segments Line1 is the red line Line2 is the blue line Line1 to Line2 the length is 500 point My question is how to set the points along the red line segment according to the blue line, if the red line is longer than the blue line, then how to set these points to the red line points to the blue line? thanks a lot for your help! A: You can use the following algorithm: Create a new list for the points (List p) Select the first (and only the first) point in the blue line: Create a new line (the blue line) that connects two points: the first and the selected then create a new line that connects the last point of the red line and the first point of the blue line. The result of this steps is the blue line. Select the last (and only the last) point in the red line: Create a new line that connects the last point in the red line with the last point in the blue line. The result of this steps is the red line.
