What's new:

, RESTLESSNESS, DISCERNMENT, AND MINDFULNESS Time slips through your fingers. Your day goes by fast. Your life goes by fast. You lose track of time as you dream, daydream, worry, think thoughts that are attached to before, and after. Attachment to the past, attachment to the future, attachment to the future thoughts. You check your phone a million times. Checking your email for notifications, Facebook updates, WhatsApp, along with your other apps. Then you do the Facebook, Slack, Whatsapp, Instagram, and other check in again. And day dreams, night dreams, daydream, and nightdream. The mind and the mind gets attached to incessantly. The mind determines which thoughts to select. You determine which actions to engage or not to engage. Try disengage the mind from the “dishonest” thoughts. Stop the mind’s attachment to “dishonest” thoughts. Meditation helps dissolve attachment to thoughts. It helps reveal the dark side of thoughts. We keep feeding our thoughts to ourselves, like a dog eats its food every time the food comes to it. It’s time to let the thoughts go and live in the present. I’ve been dropping the thoughts for some time now, to the point that I almost forget some of them. Already forgot emotions, thought-ideas attached to my loved ones and thoughts attached to friends and family. I’m sure I’ve forgotten many things. It’s almost unthinkable to forget things that were quite-literally ingrained in me. The ones I paid more attention to than any other. I tried to scrutinize them when I had the opportunity, to the point that I almost forgot what they were. Because I’ve forgotten so many things, it’s time to write them down. I’m tired of ignoring the fact that I forget them. I’m tired of feeling ashamed of it. I’ve been feeling and acting like a different person. I feel less-sensitive and less-empathetic than usual. I’ve been feeling less-sensitive, making me happier more often, but with less-empathy. I have an un-empathetic nature, but only in certain cases. Once when I’m heavily upset, when I feel
