The RPG Roguelike features a complex, randomized dungeon, full of unique enemies and locations. There's no equipment so you'll have to hunt and gather unique items to defeat them. You also have a character class, but you won't be limited to just one, and you can use your items and abilities however you see fit. Features Vast randomly generated dungeons-Everytime a new game begins, a massive system of 20 floors is generated. Huge libraries, small hallways, and open spaces await in this underground network. Fully functional 4 player co-op or singleplayer-Explore the dungeons with friends! Create tactics to distract enemies, manage the various loot found, and dominate the final boss together.-This doesn't mean you can't play alone, however. The dungeon difficulty is fully adjustable. Randomized inventory-Inventory does not go by slots, rather it is managed solely on space. Open up your pack, and place items in a fashion that allow for the maximum amount of space to be filled.-You have a single holster on your back for weapons allowing for quick access. Lot's of loot-Find various swords, wands, potions, and scrolls scattered in chests and rooms. There are a wide variety of items to fight with or use but look carefully, as the best might be hidden somewhere in the darkest corners. Spellcasting-Take control of an assortment of powerful spells, such as fire, lightning, wind, lightning, and much more. Use the available loot or create your own.-Creating items-This isn't a typical RPG where you have to find ingredients and mix them together to craft an item. You don't even need to do that. Craft weapons and other items by taking items from the enemies you fight and other sources in the dungeon. Each item can be re-created and re-crafted.-The power of the Mage: Rogue is a unique class that plays on the strengths of an untrained and self-taught fighter and wizard. With that said, a rogue can cast ranged spells, deal damage with their bow or crossbow, dodge enemy attacks with acrobatics, and potentially assassinate a group of enemies using their dagger. What's new in Dezinsector:

On Tuesday, a Turkish A-10 Warthog dropped flak in support of Turkish air strike in Syria. The rules of engagement for Turkish air force A-10s are, in other words, more expansive than those of US air force F-16s. The United States has the best fighter aircraft in the world but complicated rules of engagement constrict what American pilots can actually do on a daily basis. You can certainly ask the US Air Force to apply limits on its airpower and demand that it never use it in combat. Turkey rightly has far less economic, military, and political clout in that respect. It is not a major power. Whereas Russia finances its military in part through the export of oil, Turkey is a secular republic with an economy that accounts for 22% of the European Union. Even with two small oil and gas fields (Sosnovy and Tuzlovski), Turkey's GDP amounts to only 25% of Russia's GDP. Turkey has nowhere near the potential to mobilize a massive force on the ground or at sea like Russia can. F-15s, F-16s, and F/A-18 Hornets carrying nuclear weapons are not going to play a role in Ankara's battle against the forces of extremism in its southern city of Adana. Turkey's airpower knows no such thing as a more-capable test. It would be no fun, either, to pit an F-15 against an F-16 in the air. Turkey's lack of military superiority restrains its ability to do more than limit strikes through airpower. It has other choices. Choppers, for instance, can range thousands of kilometers with their Black Hawk and Snow Leopard surveillance systems. If Turkey wants to go further than that, it has capable, mobile airplanes available. Conversely, the use of warplanes carries with it a greater strategic risk. Ankara, an ally and an important economic partner of Washington, has been receiving considerable US military support. Washington cannot compel Ankara to understand its own resources nor to constrain its behavior. Ankara's election to an EU membership pathetically shortens Turkey's time frame to potentially extract some value from its EU membership. Moscow has also reasons to leverage Ankara that Washington cannot. If Russia wishes to play a bogeyman to Ankara as it seems to be
