Mordheim is a tabletop wargame in which players take on the roles of warbands of warriors, warlocks and priests in an apocalyptic struggle for possession of the provinces of the shattered Empire of Sigmar. Set in the ancient landscape of the Witch Hunters' homelands, players must battle with their warband to defend their settlements from the chaos of the 'End Times'. Hordes of Orcs Orcs are powerful fighters who'll swarm into any confrontation, destroying everything in their path. They are endowed with good aim and a brutal thirst for blood. Siege Weapons The Orcs have a long tradition of using siege weapons and artillery, and are especially good at taking down walls, which they're effective against any time of day. Skill Points The Orcs have a good number of skill points to invest in things like controlling neighbouring settlements and upgrading their weaponry. Minions Orcs can send down hordes of low-level creatures to bolster their main force in the field. They'll happily send down mounted units if they can find any, but they're heavily equipped with melee fighters, though rarely use them as a force-multiplier. Key Features: Fast and hard-hitting Orcs swarm into any skirmish and can tear down walls, buildings, heavy cavalry and artillery with their sheer weight of numbers. Light and mobile skirmishers provide support for larger formations, rushing into contact against enemy infantry and cavalry in a brawl, as well as slowing down enemy siege and artillery units so they can't move as quickly. Orcs are master siege weapons specialists, and will use everything they've got to bring down walls and strongpoints. Sniper Storm Orcs are masters of 'sniper' tactics and can take down larger numbers of enemy infantry with well-placed shots. While their rates of fire tend to be low, they are effective long-range shooters. Orcs can use different 'grenades' including dynamite and RPGs. Traps and Mines Orcs are expert mine and trap designers, and will often use both mediums in attack. While Orcs' rate of fire tends to be low, they are effective long-range snipers. Orcs are skilled siege engineers, and will use anything they can find to bring down walls and fortifications. Counter- c9d1549cdd

What's new:

Hey, Wrecker, how'd the job go yesterday? The job went fine, for a change. I saw some cool shit, too. Really nice set of Japanese Guy Voucher Datagrabbers. Custom-made job, too, which means that wasn't one of the douchebags with the entire Tagset for $5, but a professional. Maybe Jay could've had a bit more on it, but he's an arse. Yeah, yeah, I know that I'm a bit of a pain at times, I'm sure that I can't be the only working class drifter out there that doesn't always get along with the Taggers, but dammit I respect them. They're real creative thinkers, which is a rarity nowadays, and they spend serious money to keep themselves happy. Not to say that this means that I would ever buy from Jay though, or anyone else for that matter. They spent so much money to get good, and I respect that. All I would recommend is try it at home, to see if you want to dabble in it. You got a slow train coming through, so listen to the local bands for awhile, just to get the vibe of it. I hear they really dig Boston, too, I like that they don't shy away from their own culture. I'm willing to bet that they'd turn some heads back home, if they were to adopt the Boston Hardcore ethic. Anywho, this job I'm talking about is about a year and a half old, if you could call it that. I don't want to say that it's perfect, but if you're going to take the time and effort to look for rare things to destroy, you can't be gun shy. If you can spot something online first, great, but if not, then it's worth it to just go in and hit it, regardless of the level. One of the worst things you can do, are the ones who watch things and rewatch them and never step foot in the middle of their own traps. There's a tremendous power in living with your hands, and knowing what a machine can do. Look, I haven't been killed yet today, so maybe I should leave this observation for another time. After all, come next weekend I'll be scurrying out of here and making my way back home, so I'll probably have a few more good jobs to report later on. I'm

The game is still playable without Zsnes. My favorite kind of thing in video games is a game that is easy enough to kick my ass in and yet is hard enough to where I want to keep on playing more and more. DA2 definitely fits this bill. I've sunk over 120 hours in the game and have yet to tire of it, from all the various gameplay types and challenges from the one-hundred and thirty-two law classes. I'
