Art by Dave Bova This spring, Chris Hardwick's Nerdist podcast network announced a new show, the Nerdist Podcast, a blend of business-as-usual podcasting, interviews, and comedy bits. The result, as promised, is pretty interesting, but it's also a pretty good indicator of what's coming to TV from Chris. As Chris Hardwick announced last year, the Nerdist network is combining to become a multi-platform video content company, which is to say, Chris Hardwick is making another of his big, TV-like plays. Just as he did with his internet TV company The Curiosity Channel, he's now joining a bigger company, and he's doing it after making a big success of a network that's a lot like a conventional TV

Seven of the teams in the Competition have reached the semi-finals of the individual sessions so far. The semi-finals take place between sessions 2 and 3 and the final is on Session 4. Tickets for those wanting to be part of these sessions are available now in the UTV Nation Zone. Tickets can be purchased online from here or over the phone, although the telephone lines are now limited to four lines with queues expected to form. In the first session the riders took part in five different categories – Elite Men, Elite Women, Senior Men, Senior Women and Youth Men and Youth Women. The elite women took the early honours with Carlotta Ferlito (ITA) winning the heat in 2:04:41 ahead of the Czech Republic's Veronika Gajdekova (CZE) in 2:05:15. The junior riders, ladies and men took next, with both the men and women in tears as they were called into the ring to receive their medals. In the men's category, the hosts won the first heat in 2:22:42, ahead of Mexico in 2:22:52. Second place went to Russia in 2:26:13 and in the last heat, Mexico prevailed with a time of 2:23:21. The men's junior category produced the day's fastest rider with the Olympic champion, Alexej Koval, from Latvia, taking the win in 2:16:11. In the women's senior category, the British team grabbed first place with the best time of the day, with Emma Pooley (GBR) taking the win with a time of 2:08:22. The silver went to Mexico in 2:09:29, while third place went to Russia with 2:10:54. It was down
