Abstract We present a comparative study of the energetic and configurational properties of some isomers of O6-ethylguanine, O6-ethylthymine, and O6-ethyladenine, as the zwitterionic form. Quantum chemistry calculations are carried out at the Hartree-Fock (HF), MP2, and B3LYP levels of theory, using a new and efficient procedure to treat the long-range Coulomb interaction. Differences in the hydrogen-bonding abilities and conformational properties of these molecules are discussed in terms of natural bond orbital analysis and dihedral angle distribution plots. M40807126. Genes involved in the synthesis of the cephalosporin class of beta-lactam antibiotics. The remarkable versatility and potency of beta-lactam antibiotics have made these drugs among the most successful agents ever developed. The cephalosporins are an important subclass of beta-lactams that have become the basis for a major clinical treatment modality in human medicine. Resistance to beta-lactams has become a serious problem in both human and veterinary medicine. Of the genes involved in the synthesis of beta-lactam antibiotics, those encoding for the enzymes required to synthesize the acyl side chain, the acyl-carrier protein (acpS), and for O-acyltransferase (or OatA) have been found to occur at high frequency. The location and order of these genes vary, but in most organisms it is a single gene located near the 3' end of a large operon encoding genes for a large number of enzymes required for peptidoglycan (PG) biosynthesis.
