I have a site built with CodeIgniter, and I'm having performance issues. I'm afraid that my code is being slow because it loads the model each time it is used. Is it true that CodeIgniter queries are slower than MySql queries? What is the best practice to get better performance? A: Using Mysql queries in CodeIgniter isn't bad. Why your code isn't good? First of all, your model is using a query, not a function call. The result from the query will be used to fill an array, not to be returned. Try this: function get_all_customers() { $this->db->select('id, name'); $this->db->from('customer');
